Market outlook and news tracker

Hong Kong and China market outlook

U.S. stocks rallied on Friday, with Treasuries and the dollar slipped, as investors grew confident that the Fed won't rush to raise interest rates as the economy picks up steam. Stocks have been under pressure lately amid signs of a pickup in inflation and concerns that the Fed may be forced to raise rates more than expected.

On Chinese front, a group of companies listed in mainland China said Anbang Insurance Group has no plans to reduce holdings in the companies in the near term, according to exchange filings after the government seized temporary control of Anbang.

Over the weekend, the biggest New was China's Communist Party proposed removing from the constitution language limiting the president to two terms, the clearest sign yet that Xi Jinping intends to extend his tenure as state leader. The market is likely to maintain a sustainable rally today given this updates news. Separately, National Congress agreed to extend the implementation deadline of IPO registration system to Feb of 2020, a +VE news for Chinext and small-cap names

Further, this week focus should be new Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell testifies on the economy in Feb 27; Hong Kong's annual budget presentation in Feb 28; China's annual CPPCC meetings start in Mar 3 and are set to run over two-plus weeks. Historical data shows there is 80% odds that market will rally during 2 meetings, so market tend to be resilient this week.
